COMMENTS

09 Uncharted waters

Antonis D. Papagiannidis says the new SYRIZA government faces the uphill trek of negotiating with Greece's partners at a time when the Greek economy will have to live under conditions of extremely restricted liquidity in the months ahead

50 The instability of the marketplace and the state

Economist and author Nick Papandreou says new forms of social solidarity are a top priority at a time when long-term employment is no longer guaranteed, with the role of the state to provide some sort of protection for those without work more important than ever

ECONOMY & BONDS

14 On the cusp

With the economy having just put behind it a year of moderate growth, some see Greece as being well-positioned to take off this year, or to plummet to lows not seen in the country's five-year debt crisis

16 Greek bonds at the mercy of political developments

Volatile Greek bonds are in for a bumpy ride until the new government clarifies its stance towards the country's international creditors

FEATURES AND ANALYSIS

BANKING

18 Political uncertainty haunts Greek banks' liquidity

There were sizeable deposit outflows in the run-up to the general election, while the continuation of the political uncertainty after the elections could further undermine the Greek banking sector by raising liquidity risks and deteriorating loan quality
By Dimitris Kontogiannis

ENERGY

24 The oil crisis and its consequences

Business File Managing Editor Antonis D. Papagiannidis talks to Dr. Leonidas P. Drollas, a respected energy economist specialising in oil and gas, about the consequences of the dramatic fall in the price of crude oil

26 Making Greece a regional natural gas hub

DESFA CEO Konstantinos Xifaras outlines plans for Greece's national natural gas system

SHIPPING

28 Could LNG be shipping's future fuel?

The EU is a backer of the use of liquefied natural gas in the maritime sector, believing the greener and cheaper LNG could help reduce transport emissions and fuel supply costs
By David Glass

30 Greece continues to rule the waves

Greece remains top of the global ranking of shipowning nations, holding off the fast-rising China, which is poised to overtake Japan to become the world's number two shipowner
By David Glass

34 Maritime Silk Road to pass through Piraeus

Greece's ambitions to become a regional transportation hub are gathering steam amid plans to make Piraeus the main point of entry for Chinese commodities into Europe
